

Vogt to Teach Distance Learning Vet Tech

Written by Debbie Schwanke
Monday, 11 June 2012 20:40 -

Melissa Vogt, a 2010 graduate of the Colby Community College veterinary technician program, was recently hired as an instructor in the Distance Learning Veterinary Technician program. Vogt, a registered veterinary technician, worked in Lawrence at a veterinary clinic following graduation from CCC. She is currently completing work on her bachelor's degree in Technology Management from Kansas State University.

Students in the distance learning veterinary technology program complete traditional classroom course work online and gain hands-on experience with animals such as dogs, cats, horses, cattle, rabbits, rodents and birds in veterinary hospitals.

For more information about the veterinary technician program at CCC, contact program director Dr. Jennifer Martin at (785) 460-5466.